

WESTERN OUTDOOR NEWS

Wilderness Unlimited and WUF do much for the general public

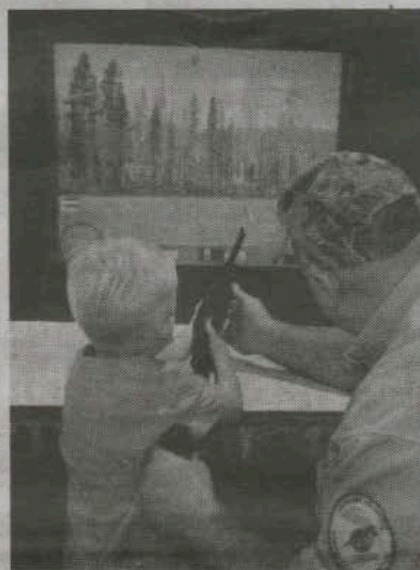

LIVERMORE — Wilderness Unlimited's "Lucy's Pond" has been the biggest draw of Western Outdoor News YOUTH OUTDOOR SPORTS FAIR since its inception nearly 20 years ago, and for all that time, they have continued to provide the venue, free of charge, just for the fun of youngsters.

There is no better thing to say about Wilderness Unlimited than their support of the YOSF, since well over half a million kids have enjoyed what they provide for free, and a good many of them are not prolific anglers and outdoorsmen and women in California.

But there is more that they do: The Wilderness Unlimited Foundation or WUF is a non-profit 501(c)3 organization that many in the west may not be aware of. Those familiar with Wilderness Unlimited, (W.U.) the west's largest hunting and fishing club specializing in accessing private land may think they know about WUF.

WUF was founded officially 6 years ago to take over and expand the outdoor outreach, heritage, habitat and education programs being administered by W.U. While W.U. is a private club that pioneered many of these programs, WUF also does all it can to include the public in their sponsored activities. The biggest example right here at the Sacramento Expo is the youth fishing pond in the Youth Outdoor Sports Fair. "Lucy's Pond" has been the cornerstone of the Youth Fair since its inception over 20 years ago.

THE LAZER shoot, manned by the Department of Fish and Game Hunters Education instructors, allows youngsters to get a taste of the real thing during the Western Outdoor News YOUTH OUTDOOR SPORTS FAIR in Building D. WCN PHOTO BY BILL KARR

WUF does far more, and to find out the details, and how you, even if you're not a member, can participate, go to WUF at www.WUFound.org or write to Wilderness Unlimited Foundation, 22433 Meekland, Hayward, CA 94541.

As published in Western Outdoor News

on

January 13th 2012

